

Williamstown not too cool for Airdrie school

The school bells will be ringing in Williamstown in Airdrie in the fall of 2012 with the announcement by the Rocky View School Division it has selected the Vesta Properties' community as the location of Airdrie's newest school.

Construction on the first phase of the school will begin in the fall of 2011 with the opening scheduled for the 2012/2013 school year.

Upon completion, the new school is expected to have capacity for 900 students and is next to a playing field, as per Williamstown's community plan.

"We are extremely excited about this new school at Williamstown," says Curt Woodhall, senior marketing manager at Vesta Properties. "The city of Airdrie attracts a significant number of young families and to have access to a new school within walking distance is a very desirable community amenity for our home buyers, especially with the limited capacity of current schools in Airdrie."

The master plan at Williamstown also includes children's playgrounds, parks, walking trails and over 60 acres of open green space.

With townhomes starting in the low-$200,000s, laned detached homes starting in the high-$200,000s and 2-storey single-family homes starting in the mid-$300,000s, the new homes in Williamstown are not only affordable, they offer excellent value and long-term investment for young families. The new school adds another amenity that sets the community apart.
